In every instance, when we surrender to the passions or persuasions of temptation, we are sowing the seeds for future chaos; for whatever man sows, he will reap (Galatians 6:7) more than he sows, later than he sows.

We sacrifice our future for the pleasure of the present when we are blind to the true values of life.

We sacrifice our future when we are ruled by our appetites.

We sacrifice our future when we insist on immediate gratification.

We sacrifice our future when we focus on the temporal rather than the eternal.

We sacrifice our future when we make critical decisions in times of physical or emotional stress.

We sacrifice the future when we have little respect for spiritual things.

We sacrifice our future when we fail to consider the consequences of our actions.

The most subtle temptations we face are from the world.

Most of the world’s temptations are not things illegal or immoral, but to things subtly devastating to our spiritual welfare.

Know that the enemy’s attack comes from one of three sources: the devil, world, or flesh.

Know that the attacks will be against one of three areas: the spirit, soul, or body can help us fight temptation.
